PARTNER WITH GSC IN SUPPORT OF THE GLOBAL GOALS FOR SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

On September 25, 2015, 193 world leaders committed to the UN’s 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, with 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) at the center. These SDGs, which took effect on January 1, 2016, present a historic and unprecedented opportunity to bring the countries, companies and citizens of the world together in new ways to improve the lives of people around the world.

In support of the United Nations’ SDG agenda, the GSC has developed the “17 Weeks/17 SDGs” Initiative to help businesses translate these aspirational global goals into action.

17/17 aims to:
• Inform and engage the global business community in the 2030 Agenda;
• Provide global visibility for businesses embracing SDGs in their business strategies, and
• Share best practices of SDG-embracing leaders to inspire others.

What are the 17 SDGs?

The 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) are part of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development adopted by the UN General Assembly in Fall 2015 to end poverty; promote prosperity and well-being for all; and protect the environment and address climate change. The world has come together to agree on ambitious priorities for sustainable development that are reshaping the practice of development globally, including the role of the private sector. These Global Goals are stimulating action over the next fifteen years in areas of critical importance for humanity and the planet — dubbed the “Five P’s”:

PEOPLE ■ PLANET ■ PROSPERITY ■ PEACE ■ PARTNERSHIP

The SDGs — or Global Goals for Sustainable Development — developed by governments with the close involvement of non-profits and businesses. Covering a broad scope of social, environmental and economic challenges, these are universal goals for all countries (developed and developing) and organizations (public, private and third sector) to achieve collaboratively.

3 Reasons Why Business Should Care about SDGs

In the long run, businesses cannot succeed unless the world succeeds. More immediately, the SDGs provide a framework for innovation and aim to channel investment for public and private sectors toward shared global priorities. Businesses stand to gain if they get involved in the right ways.

1 NEW MARKETS
The SDGs represent a significant new opportunity for companies that view emerging and frontier markets as their source of long-term growth. According to estimates from McKinsey, consumers in these markets could have spending power of $30 trillion by 2025, a significant step up from the 2010 value of $12 trillion. Taking action on the Global Goals could address several obstacles that create ‘trapped value’ in the emerging markets.

2 COMPETITIVE ADVANTAGE
With public declarations by many companies to help further the SDGs, there is likely to be competitive pressure. Companies could position themselves as leaders in sustainable development by incorporating the SDGs. Hesitation to act could lead to being slow to take action could lead to being left out of these relationships and become a source of competitive disadvantage from a brand equity perspective.

3 PROFIT (THE 6TH P)
The SDGs cannot be realized without business participation. The price tag for accomplishing the SDGs is estimated to be up to $3 trillion a year for 15 years. For most governments, financing the Goals’ achievement will be a stretch. In fact, some governments have reneged have already reneged in the past on commitments for similar targets. This time around, many governments and UN leaders have stressed the importance of private sector support to meet the world’s SDGs.

Educate & Inspire – The GSC 17 Weeks / 17 SDGs Initiative

For 17 consecutive weeks, the GSC, its supporters and partners are providing a platform to educate and inspire extraordinary activities around the 17 SDGs in sourcing and supply chains through a comprehensive communications program focused on one SDG per week.

Showcase Your Leadership on One or More SDGs

Support our program, change the world and take the opportunity to utilize the GSC 17/17 SDG platform to communicate your organization’s experience, commitment, goals and stories by sponsoring one or more SDGs that are aligned with your business strategy. Tell your SDGs story and gain competitive advantage, access to new markets, and inspire your employees, clients and communities you operate in.

The Global Sourcing Council (GSC) is a voluntary, public-private initiative, registered with the IRS as a non-profit 501(c)(3) status, that is focused on sustainable, socially responsible sourcing practices. By bringing together businesses, industry organizations, academics and trade representatives of different countries, the GSC provides an open forum for discussion of social, economic and political effects of global sourcing arrangements.

Through research, publications, education and dialogue, the GSC promotes an understanding of roles and impact of all stakeholders in global trade in goods and services. The GSC addresses timely issues important to any company involved in global business operations and to any country where sourcing is taking place.
